They declared that in many instances Mr. Morris was credited with Mr. Morse's vote and vice versa. No figures could be produced, however, to show that this had been done or that Stephens had only 4 plurality as asserted. There remains, then, no reason to doubt that Messis. Morris, Stephens and Timmony are safely elected and the official count by the council next Monday will show it. The attorneyship race will of course, be watched with special interest by friends of both carididates, but nobedy seriously believes now that the result as published in The Herald will be changed.

Cost Estimated at $15,000.

None of the Republicans were willing to make an estimate on the cost of the campaign. Arthur Pratt denied that any money had been received from outside sources, but he said he was unable to give any figures on the amount of cash distributed. It is stated on good authority, however, that the expenses of the Republican campaign camp close to $15,000. It may be a little over or a little under this amount. Certain it is that there was an notime any lack of coin. Chairman Eichnor had a ready "bundle" day and night, and so did his prominent advisors. A large proportion of this was jut up by Mr. Thompson and the men who had wagered heavily on his election probably put up the balance, except the sums countributed by the candidates under Mr. Thompson by assessments levied by the committee.
